Funds are requested to support the Phase I proof-of-concept project being conducted by Ms. Willow Newcomb under my supervision. Her study, which evaluates the effects of sleep deprivation on reappraisal abilities, is consistent with her long-term goals to pursue advanced training in psychological science. Having supervised her review of the literature and design of an innovative (and publishable) experiment, we are proposing to recruit 80 participants to take part in the study. As the study involves a two-day commitment with half of participants randomly assigned to stay awake for an entire night providing mood ratings hourly, remuneration is required to successfully recruit subjects. Based on past experience conducting similar studies, $50 is a sufficient level of compensation to successfully recruit but not coerce participation. $4000 is thus requested for this purpose. The remaining $2490 will fund the Ms. Newcomb's participation in the 32nd Annual Meeting of the Associated Professional Sleep Societies being held June 2nd – 8th in Baltimore, MA. Ms. Newcomb and a chaperone will spend four days and three nights attending the conference. I will attend as well in order to provide mentoring about the role and value of scientific conferences and dissemination. Given federal per diem rates of $156/day for lodging, $69/day meals, approximately $600 for airline tickets, and $135 (student predoctoral non-member), $2490 is requested for Ms. Newcomb (and an accompanying chaperone) to travel to Baltimore for the invaluable experience of disseminating her study findings at a major conference.
