

CORNELL UNIVERSITY

COMMENCEMENT
OF THE
ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHTH
GRADUATING CLASS

MAY 23, 2026

SCHOELLKOPF FIELD
ITHACA, NEW YORK

GREETINGS TO THE CLASS OF 2026

Dear Graduates,

In 1862, Andrew Dickson White laid out his plan for “a truly great university”: one that would educate students for lives of integrity and purpose, fuel the nation’s forward progress, and serve as a new model for American education; one that would provide, as he put it, for “better things in our beloved country.”

In the following years, A. D. White and Ezra Cornell began the work of building a university of breathtaking ambition in a country emerging from a devastating civil war: “an institution where any person can find instruction in any study,” that would enable students of every background to gain the knowledge and expertise, across every discipline and the professions, that a rebuilding democracy needed to build a better future for all. Where other universities focused on preparing certain kinds of students for a certain kind of life, Cornell lifted its aspirations higher: aiming to equip capable citizens of every background with the tools to live lives of meaningful impact for our country and the world. Once radical, this vision of the purpose of higher education is now widely embraced—but the Cornell ethos, built over generations, is still uniquely our own.

Today, Cornell graduates its 158th class. Together, you represent the full sweep of Cornell’s “... any person ... any study” ambition—students from every part of the world, with knowledge and expertise in every one of our fields of study. Together, you carry with you the democratic vision that inspired Cornell’s founding—a commitment that resonates with renewed urgency today, as we seek new ways to address emerging and enduring challenges across the world that we share.

Congratulations to you all.
