Charter for the Office of University Ombuds
Updated: October 2022

The Cornell University Ombuds is a confidential, independent, impartial, and informal resource available to students, staff, and faculty at the university to address conflicts, concerns, or other issues affecting their work, life, or study at Cornell. The position was established in 1969 and has existed continuously since then.\(^1\) This Charter is fundamentally based on the Guidelines originally established for the office, which received minor revisions in 1971 and 2013.

Appointment of Ombuds
The University Ombuds is appointed by the University President, subject to approval of the University Assembly. The Ombuds serves a two-year term, which may be renewed indefinitely. To fill a vacancy in the office, the President or a designee will appoint a search committee to which the Assembly may appoint a representative.

The University Ombuds is responsible for appointing other Ombuds Office staff.\(^2\)

Jurisdiction
The Ombuds Office is available to all students, staff, and faculty affiliated with all units of Cornell University, excluding Weill Cornell Medicine.

Purpose and Services Offered
The Ombuds Office supports Cornell’s core values, including its commitment to being a community of belonging and to free and open inquiry and expression. The Ombuds Office fosters a culture of respect, inclusion, ethical behavior and fair process.

The Ombuds Office offers a safe place where community members may discuss conflicts, problems, or other issues. The Ombuds listens to visitor concerns, facilitates constructive dialogue, and assists in evaluating available options. Use of the Ombuds Office is entirely voluntary in all cases.

The Ombuds Office also serves as a conflict resolution resource, to advise members of the community about where to turn and what procedures to follow to pursue whatever concern they may have.

The Ombuds Office provides information on University policies, procedures, and practices; provides information on how to make the University aware of particular concerns; and refers visitors to the proper authority to resolve concerns or issues.

The Ombuds Office brings to the attention of those in authority (and, if necessary, to the community at large) any gaps and inadequacies in existing University policies and procedures.

\(^1\) See Appendix I: History; Appendix 2, 1969 Kahn Memo; Appendix 3, 1971 Guidelines; Appendix 4, 2013 Guidelines.

\(^2\) In most cases, references in this Charter to the Ombuds refer to both the individual appointed as University Ombuds and to the staff of the Ombuds Office.
While maintaining confidentiality, the Ombuds Office provides the University with early warning of emerging issues or patterns of concerns. The Ombuds alerts the appropriate administrator (or other person in authority) when a systemic issue or trend occurs, for the purpose of improving existing processes.

The Ombuds Office responds to concerns that decisions affecting members of the community are made with reasonable promptness, and that all members of the community receive due process.

The Ombuds Office responds to concerns about the adequacy of procedures adopted to reach decisions, and also about the appropriateness of the criteria and rules used to reach decisions.

While the Ombuds Office does not advocate for any particular visitor, the Ombuds Office does serves as an advocate for dignity, equity, and inclusion at Cornell. The Ombuds Office contributes to fair processes, fair treatment, and fair outcomes at the University.

Ethical Principles

In all activities, the Ombuds follows principles presented in the Standards of Practice and Ethical Principles of the International Ombuds Association: Confidentiality, Independence, Impartiality, and Informality.

Confidentiality

The Ombuds holds the identity and all communications with those seeking assistance in strict confidence, and does not disclose confidential communications unless given permission to do so, except as required by law, or where, in the judgment of the Ombuds, there appears to be imminent risk of serious harm.

The confidentiality of Ombuds Office communications is honored at all levels of the University. Accordingly, there is an expectation that the Ombuds will normally not be asked to testify on the University’s behalf in internal and/or external proceedings. No meetings are recorded by the Ombuds Office, by visitors, or by University staff unless explicitly permitted.

Independence

As stated in the 1969 Kahn memo that established the role, the Ombuds Office “shall be independent of all existing administrative structures of the University.” The Ombuds is independent in structure, function, and appearance to the highest degree possible within Cornell. The office is ultimately accountable for its operation to the community.

Impartiality

the Ombuds is not authorized to accept notice (formal complaints) for Cornell. The Ombuds can provide information to the visitor on how to make the University aware of a particular issue. However, because the Ombuds holds all communications with those seeking assistance in strict confidence, subject to the limited exceptions detailed above, the Ombuds will not forward information received in confidence.

Access to Information

All such officials shall, subject to University policies and protocols, and state and federal law, share such information as may be appropriate.

Any requests for information will honor the tenet of confidentiality.

Budget
To fulfill the Ombuds Office function, the office shall have a budget that contains sufficient resources to meet operating needs and to adequately serve the community, including sufficient staff and continuing professional development.

The University Ombuds shall have the sole authority to manage the budget, operations of the office, including the hiring of all Ombuds Office staff.

No Retaliation for Using Ombuds Office
All students, faculty and staff have the right to freely use the services of the Ombuds Office. Retaliation for exercising this right shall not be tolerated.
