“Are You a Professional or Just an Engineer?”

Featuring

Kenneth E. Arnold, P.E.

Senior Technical Advisor, WorleyParsons and Consultant

This presentation discusses the actions required by an engineer to be truly a “professional” as opposed to an individual who responds to “givens,” “deliverables” and “time allotted.” Too often some engineers define their role as merely applying the science and knowledge of engineering to defined tasks. Is that all there is to being a “professional” or are their additional standards that must be met to distinguish between professional behavior and just plain good engineering? If so what are these standards and how do you as an individual stack up against them? You may be surprised and find out that you have not always acted as the professional you think you are.
