

NU grants self-rule

By STEVE SINK Assistant Managing Editor

Northwestern living units yesterday were given final authority to make their own social rules.

Administration approval of autonomy was announced at an open meeting in Cahn Auditorium by Vice-President and Dean of Students Roland J. Hinz.

Autonomy will start for any living unit that submits a constitution to Student Senate and gets that constitution verified. Living units not presenting constitutions must continue to follow university rules.

HINZ TOLD 300 students in Cahn that verification was the job of senate and that the Council on Undergraduate Life "does not intend to study each living unit constitution."

Hinz said CUL's role will be to concern itself with broad campus issues. He included "possible future changes" in autonomy as the type of issue the council will turn to next.

He stressed that self-regulation carries an obligation to assume a great amount of responsibility.

Autonomy "is not and should not be regarded as a license for any individual or living unit to do whatever it pleases," Hinz said.

BUT HE QUICKLY assured the students that administrative approval was granted without hesitation. "The council and the administration are betting on you with no reluctance."

R. Barry Farrell, political science professor and a member of CUL, joined Hinz on the Cahn stage and also urged student responsibility.

"We haven't really thought out the details of what we're doing," Farrell said. He urged living units to "consult with those who know the law. One way you can hurt us is to produce either some kind of irresponsible scene or some disaster happening through thoughtlessness or lack of care."

Hinz said he thought CUL proceeded through the autonomy issue with "thoughtful care, but also with all due haste."

STUDENT SENATE President Fran Shanahan was the only other person to speak at the meeting. He thanked Hinz and CUL for "the prompt action that brought this program into realization."

Shanahan said that, speaking as a representative of the student body, he could assure the administration autonomy responsibly.

The "Student Self-Determination" bill approved by Hinz calls for living units to establish constitutions for self-regulation with six common conditions.

Living units must comply with local, state and federal laws; respect the rights and property of the university and of other students; ban firearms; abide by the university drug policy; restrict fall quarter freshmen to rules set by Men's Residence Halls Association and Associated Women Students; and keep parietal hours within noon to closing hours seven days a week.

THE FINAL DECISION

"I feel a little like Winston Churchill. All we have been able to offer were blood, sweat and tears. And that's what it has been. I can't but feel confident that it has been worth it."

"My heart is on my sleeve. The fatigue that has built up over the last few days makes it even easier to see how I feel." Hinz announced the victory of the autonomy drive at a meeting yesterday. (Story on page 3.)

'68-'69 Daily board chosen

Walter named editor

John Walter, junior newspaper major, last night was selected editor of the Daily Northwestern for 1968-69 by the Student Board of Publications.

Steve Sink, a junior newspaper major, was named managing editor in a revamping of the Daily's editorial board. No executive editor was chosen.

Tom Davies, an independent from Toledo, O., and Bob Greene, from Columbus, O., were named associate editors. Kathy Kelly, a newspaper major from St. Louis and member of Kappa Delta sorority, was named to the elevated position of assistant managing editor.

THIS NEW STAFF takes over the Daily Northwestern today.

The board also selected Sue Rosencranz, a junior from Evansville, Ind., as editor of the 1969 Syllabus, the Northwestern yearbook.

Frank Feldinger, a journalism major from Winnetka, was chosen to edit the literary magazine Sycamore next year.

Walter, 21, is from Broadview Heights, O. An independent, Walter is a member of Norleggama, junior men's honorary, and Sigma Delta Chi, the men's professional journalism society. He worked last summer as a general assignment reporter for the Rochester (N.Y.) Times-Union.

HE JOINED the Daily in his freshman year and served as campus editor and assistant managing editor.

Sink, a member of Theta Xi fraternity, is from South Bend, Ind. He has worked four summers on the South Bend Tribune. Sink has worked three years on the Daily, holding positions as campus editor and assistant managing editor.

Davies also has worked three years on the Daily. He is a member of Sigma Delta Chi and will be a reporter this summer for the Toledo Blade. Greene, who joined the staff last quarter, worked last summer on the Columbus Citizen-Journal.

NU black students make demands of university

By BILL HARSH Assistant Managing Editor

Northwestern black students have presented administration officials with a list of grievances that must be answered by 5 p.m. today, the Daily Northwestern learned yesterday.

The list demands that the university:

- Deplore "the viciousness of 'white racism,'" and move to eliminate "all conscious or unconscious racist policies, practices and institutions" on campus. The list demands that the university "go to any extent" to achieve this goal.
•Guarantee the gradual expansion of the black student body to "a more realistic level which we (the black students) shall decide." The grievances also demand that at least one-half of all black students admitted each year come from inner-city school systems.
•Make jobs now required as part of scholarships optional and provide funds for black students who want or need to attend summer school.

•"Provide a living unit(s) for those black students who want to live together" and end the system that allows white girls to object to black roommates after room assignments have been made.

•Add a program of studies in black literature, history and art to the curriculum and grant black students the "ultimate decision in the choice of professors to be hired to teach these courses."

•Create a black Student Union and offices for black student organizations.
•Desegregate all NU real estate holdings and present evidence, in the form of a monthly report to the president of For Members Only, that "Northwestern is doing more than taking 'a stand on Open Occupancy.'"

The Daily obtained the text of the grievances from a source outside the administration and the black student community. A black student spokesman had sought to withhold the text from publication because negotiations, he said, now are at a crucial stage.

THE LIST of grievances was sent to 12 members of the administration Monday afternoon, Kathryn Ogletree, an FMO spokesman, said.

Miss Ogletree said 75 percent of Northwestern's 120 black students attended a two-hour meeting with Vice-President and Dean of Students Roland J. Hinz and Director of Admissions William I. Inlandfelt Wednesday night.

James Turner, a spokesman for the Afro-American Student Union, said "some of the issues were resolved (at the meeting) but some of the very important issues are still awaiting decision"

The list of grievances was drafted by the executive board of FMO. FMO is a campus black student organization that claims 80 of 120 Northwestern black students as paying members. However, FMO speaks for the whole Northwestern black community, Miss Ogletree said.

The list of grievances states that "the university either responds to our demands or we have no other alternative but to respond to its lack of response."

Senate focuses on self-rule, NU blacks

JOHN WALTER
Assistant Managing Editor

Student Senate President Fran Shanahan last night called for two special committees to deal with two major problems on the Northwestern campus — autonomy and the problems of black students at Northwestern.

In a meeting with senate, Shanahan announced he was establishing a committee on self-determination coordination to verify house self-rule constitutions, maintain communication with all houses on campus and insure autonomy's responsibility.

He also announced reinstatement of senate's Human Relations Commission to study the black student question. Class of '71 Senator Mark Berlin was named chairman.

"THE KEYNOTE of this administration," Shanahan told senate, "will be one dedicated to responsibility among your constituents. "To promote a policy of responsibility among your constituents you must take the initiative," he told senators.

On discrimination issues in the past, Shanahan said, "senate has slinked down to the side and watched things go by. The problem of the black students here—the racism, the hypocrisy is just deplorable," he said.

THE HUMAN Relations Commission, which before last night was under the jurisdiction of senate's community affairs committee, was first instituted in 1962 to investigate barber shop discrimination in the Evanston area. The outcome of that investigation, after a Jamaican student was denied service in an Evanston shop, was a pledge of non-discrimination from the shop's proprietor.

Named to the autonomy committee were Class of '71 Senator Clyde Jeffers, Class of '69 Senator Lauri Kreer, Associate Senator George Berry and Senate Vice-President Steve Nisenbaum.

At his first regularly scheduled meeting since last week's election, Shanahan said his plans for the coming year include "making absolutely sure our self-determination program gets off the ground successfully" and getting senate actively involved in Evanston civil rights.

HE CALLED for a continued effort toward revision of the Council on Undergraduate Life—although he praised that group as "responsible to students and responsive to student interests."

The new president also asked for more student involvement and concern "in activities with the faculty" including possible representation on Faculty Senate and curriculum-forming bodies.

Berry, a junior in journalism, and Paulee Lipsman, a speech junior, were named non-voting associate senators by Shanahan and approved by senate.

Asks student consultation

Senate on guns: NU should reconsider

Student Senate last night criticized the university for arming its campus police.

An issue of this importance, senate said, should be decided only with the consent of the students.

The matter came to senate's attention after the Daily Northwestern in a story last month reported that three campus security patrolmen started carrying sidearms this year. On a student referendum last year, students overwhelmingly disapproved of a proposal that police carry guns.

THE ANTI-GUN BILL, written by Senate Treasurer Doug Behr, did not specifically condemn carrying of sidearms, but did condemn the university for, after the referendum, taking the action without consulting with or informing students.

Passed 12 to 3, the bill asked that "presently armed policemen be disarmed until the students have been given a cogent and acceptable reason for their armament and until the students have the opportunity to express their stand."

Class of '71 Senator Caren Levy said: "It is self-evident why they carry guns. I can't see a man here to protect my life if he is only armed with a walkie-talkie."

"All we are asking at this point is that we be consulted," Behr said. MEN OFF CAMPUS Senator

John Heerman said, however, that "in Chicago or anywhere I don't think people are consulted when steps are taken to arm the police."

Campus Security Chief Ted Arndt

had said William S. Kerr, university vice-president and business manager, gave him authority to decide on whether guns would be carried. This was confirmed by Kerr.

Project Concern to benefit deprived areas in Chicago

Project Concern, a group of 275 Northwestern students interested in improving living conditions in deprived areas, moves into Chicago tomorrow.

"We're very pleased with the response," said co-chairman Gail Spelman. "We were looking for people who had a real interest in helping, not just for masses."

Project Concern needs students with cars to help drive others, Miss Spelman said.

THE PROJECT is a revamped version of Operation Evanston, which concerned itself with underprivileged areas in the immediate vicinity of Northwestern.

"We're working with some interesting social groups," Miss Spelman said. "Groups like the American Indian Center, and Hull House, that I think people will enjoy finding out about."

Miss Spelman said she hopes Project Concern can expand next year to at least five days in Chicago, instead of the single outing this year.

Stevenson, Goldberg —now Ball: NU grads to UN ambassadors

George Ball, appointed by President Johnson yesterday to the post of U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, is the third successive Northwestern graduate to hold that office.

Both Arthur J. Goldberg and Adlai Stevenson, the two previous U.N. ambassadors, graduated from Northwestern's School of Law.

BALL RECEIVED a B.A. from the College of Arts and Sciences in 1930 and a law degree in 1933. He was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree in 1964 and the NU alumni medal in 1966.

Goldberg graduated from the law school here in 1930, became an honorary doctor of laws in 1963 and received the alumni medal at last year's Founders Day ceremony.

Stevenson was awarded a law degree in 1926 and an honorary degree in 1946.

Both Goldberg and Ball originally entered government service as appointees of the late President Kennedy.

Ball served as Undersecretary of State under Kennedy, and until yesterday was an adviser to President Johnson.

GOLDBERG WAS Secretary of Labor to Kennedy and a U.S. Supreme Court justice before becoming U.N. ambassador. He said he now will join a New York law firm.

In appointing Ball to the ambassadorship, the President described him as "a distinguished public servant."

Johnson said he was accepting Goldberg's resignation "with regret."

Goldberg is expected to continue as ambassador until June.

The Chicago Daily News reported yesterday that Goldberg is prepared to stay on at the U.N. to manage the recently opened General Assembly debate on a new treaty to ban the spread of nuclear weapons.

Frats ease deferred pledging criticism

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
Staff Writer

With fall rush a certainty at least this year, Northwestern fraternities have slackened efforts to influence a university decision on deferred pledging. But fraternity alumni have not.

University Vice-President and Dean of Students Roland J. Hinz told Greek unit presidents in a letter last week that no decision on a University Senate-approved recommendation for deferred fraternity and sorority pledging would be made until after rush week next fall.

The faculty Committee on Educational Policies recommendation, formulated last May, would set formal rush week between the last day of examinations winter quarter and the first day of spring registration. Hinz received the plan in February.

INTERFRATERNITY Council's reactions, attacking both the probable effects of the plan and the rationale behind it, were presented in a report to Hinz later in February.

Recent considerations of living unit autonomy and of revising summer rush rules have pushed back lobbying against the CEP proposal, IFC officials said.

But Alumni Fraternity Board President Frank Gorom, concerned that CEP "is using bleeding techniques to slowly destroy the fraternity system," said that AFB members are talking to Hinz and other university officials in a "subtle campaign" against the deferred rush proposal.

"The fraternity system would be neither diminished nor eliminated by deferred rush," Gorom said.

reasoning will be presented if rush "But I hope a good body of logical is deferred."

AFB HAS INVITED the four NU vice-presidents, Dean of Men Seward Weber and his assistant, James F. Stull, to its annual banquet next month to discuss with them the board's position on the deferred rush proposal, Gorom said.

That stand will appear in the Northwestern Alumni News in June in an article prepared by AFB Vice-President L. Edward Bryant Jr.

The 12-page report includes six recommendations, including more effective university and faculty-sponsored orientation of freshmen in New Student Week and a rush evaluation survey by a cross-section of affiliated and unaffiliated undergraduates before a decision on deferred pledging is made.

IFC President John Reagan said he's not optimistic about the results of such a survey because "even most fraternity men think of rush as a hectic week they'd rather put off. They won't consider the financial effects on their own houses."

BECAUSE OF MEETINGS on the autonomy question, Reagan said, "I haven't had time to pick up my books, much less write up rush reports." But, he said, Harry Morse, IFC central rush chairman, will conduct a study on deferred pledging's effect on fraternity finances and scholastic averages.

Morse said he expects to make the survey, but not soon. Of more concern now, he said, is a possible revision of summer rush rules, which he discussed with house presidents last week.

Meanwhile, Stull, dean for fraternity affairs, is conducting for Hinz an in-staff study of possible effects of deferred pledging. Stull said he thinks Hinz will make a decision after conferring with other vice-presidents.

Students welcome spring gently

By JOANN LUBLIN
Campus Editor

Today's "Rite of Spring" on Deering Meadow differs from last year's "Gentle Thursday" celebration of spring's arrival because it's Friday, rite organizer Michael Levine said yesterday.

But Levine, a grad student who helped plan last year's Gentle Thursday, refused to get more explicit about this afternoon's rite.

"I just can't define this thing," Levine said, "because it would turn off people."

The name "Rite of Spring" is based on a 1911 work by composer Igor Stravinsky, Levine said.

"THE RITE of Spring means a totally non-partisan thing," Levine said. "Do whatever you want to do." That can mean flying kites or jumping rope or anything, he added.

People should only come to Deering Meadow at midday if they want to enjoy themselves, the rite organizer said. Levine emphasized that the celebration does not necessarily have a "connotation of hippies or flower children."

The Rite of Spring is being held on Friday instead of Thursday because last year the celebration took place next to a NROTC drill on the meadow. "We don't mean

REMEMBER THURSDAY?

This was the scene at Gentle Thursday last year, with religion professor Edmund Perry treating students to grape juice. Anything goes again today in the Rite of Spring celebration on the meadow. It should be gentle. (Photo by Bill Smith) to cause any trouble for the (university) administration," Levine said.

"BRING A FLOWER for someone, even if you don't know who you can love," a poster advertising the Rite of Spring reads.

"Bring... a loaf of bread. Someone else will likely bring cheese and sharing is all we really want to do."

Levine said he had made no arrangements to reserve Deering Meadow for the rite.

"Well, you're supposed to," Mrs. Melba Peterson, calendar office secretary, said yesterday.

"If there's any charge for grass in this world," Levine commented, "then there's no sense in being in this world."

Young leaves NU alum post; Frank to succeed him

Marcus T. Young, director of alumni relations, is leaving Northwestern to accept a job as vice-president for development at National College of Education, it was learned yesterday.

He will be replaced here by Raymond J. Frank, director of administrative services for the office of planning and development.

THE APPOINTMENTS, announced yesterday, are effective May 1.

Young, 40, has been in the alumni relations post since Sept. 6, 1966. Prior to that he had 10 years of experience in alumni relations work and served as director of alumni affairs at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., 1963 to 1966.

A graduate of Valparaiso University, Young at NU has been in charge of an alumni body of more than 120,000.

The alumni program here is administered by a nine-member board of directors of the Alumni Association and the Department of Alumni Relations. The alumni director's job is under the supervision of Franklin M. Kreml, vice-president, planning and development.

Frank also comes from Kreml's department. He is 43.

MARCUS T. YOUNG
Resigns as alum director

A GRADUATE of Northwestern's School of Commerce in 1948, Frank worked for Marsteller Inc., a Chicago-based advertising agency.

He left there as a financial vice-president in June, 1967, to join NU's planning and development staff.

While here he has overseen details of office personnel and provided an administrative review of all of the department's business operations.

A great day for Hinz

By BOB GREENE
Staff Writer

Roland J. Hinz leaned forward and grasped the edges of the Cahn Auditorium podium with both hands. His voice was heavy with weariness and emotion.

"My heart is on my sleeve," he said slowly. "The fatigue that has built up over the last few days makes it even easier to see how I feel."

AND THEN HINZ told 300 students that their quest for autonomy was over, that it had been won and that Northwestern's administration stood behind them.

He said it with pride and with relief, because from the day he moved into James McLeod's vacated Scott Hall office, Roland Hinz has been with the students. And now, because the students had won their victory, Hinz had won too.

The students responded with prolonged applause. Hinz smiled his first smile of the afternoon.

OEO gives funds to Upward Bound

The federal Office of Economic Opportunity has granted $161,157 to Northwestern to help finance NU's Upward Bound program. Upward Bound is a program of the War on Poverty directed at high school students.

"Communities in Action," a magazine published by a branch of OEO, described Upward Bound as "... the Head Start program of the teenage set." It said the program is interested in "underprivileged youngsters... lost to society."

NU also received a grant last year.

"I feel a little like Winston Churchill," he said. "All we have been able to offer were blood, sweat and tears. And that's what it has been. I can't help but feel confident that it has been worth it."

HINZ WAS QUICK to point out the responsibilities that go with autonomy. He did it without reservation.

"The Council on Undergraduate Life and the administration are betting on you, and with no hesitation to do so," he said. "By taking this responsibility to heart you will have a richer and more rewarding experience as members of the student body of Northwestern University."

He introduced members of CUL individually and asked each of them to stand.

"I feel you owe them a great show of thanks," he said.

AFTER FACULTY and student

"I've left my right and left hands until last," he said, preparing to introduce Dean of Women Patricia A. Thrash and Dean of Men Seward Weber.

"My life this year has been extremely difficult, as you might suspect," he said. "Without these two it would have been impossible."

And then he started to talk about racial problems on campus. He said that racism cannot be allowed to exist at Northwestern, and his voice was firm. He said that students must remember that the problem of racial tension is their most personal concern.

"I hope you'll not let that thought out of your mind for some time to come," he said quietly.

With that, Hinz turned and walked briskly off the stage. The crowd stood and applauded as he walked up the aisle.

Black students confront university

Miss Ogletree said black students considered one week sufficient time for the university to respond. That time expires at 5 p.m. today.

HINZ IS EXPECTED to issue an official response sometime today. Miss Ogletree said black students will meet at 5 p.m. to consider the university's response.

"We don't intend to keep cool" if the university's response is unsatisfactory, Miss Ogletree said.

Eva Jefferson, Class of '71 senator, had arranged to present the list of grievances to Student Senate last night. She withdrew the list about 5 p.m. yesterday.

Miss Jefferson and Miss Ogletree declined to say why the list of grievances was not sent to senate.
