first-year students at University Park and 2,200 World Campus students watching via livestream at New Student Convocation. The Penn State class of 2027 is diverse, representing forty-five U.S. states, Guam, and Puerto Rico, as well as seventy-three nations around the world. Over 4,000 are from Pennsylvania and 850 are international students. Nearly 1,700 are the first in their families to go to college. Thirty-nine veterans who served in the United States armed forces are also joining the class of 2027. Chair Schuyler welcomed Penn State's incoming class, returning students, and World Campus students attending Penn State from around the world on behalf of the Board of Trustees and wished them all best of luck.

Chair Schuyler noted World Campus is celebrating twenty-five years of online education at Penn State, after beginning in January 1998 when its first class in turfgrass management debuted online. Currently, Penn State World Campus offers a comprehensive selection of online programs, with more than 175 degree and certificate programs providing a high quality and engaging online college experience akin to academic programs supplied students attending Penn State campuses in-residence. To mark this milestone, Penn State Berkey Creamery’s birthday cake–flavored ice cream has been temporarily renamed “Penn State World Campus 25th Birthday Bash”, and it will be available for scoop purchase in Berkey Creamery through November 30, 2023.

Chair Schuyler observed Penn State Commonwealth Campuses also welcomed students back. For instance, Chancellor Radha Pyati, who assumed the role of chancellor and dean of Penn State Berks on July 1, 2023, welcomed students and families while coordinator of student support services Alexa Hodge encouraged students through a speech entitled “Belonging: You Matter” to lean on the connections they form to build their own community. Penn State Dickinson Law Convocation welcomed 108 members of the Class of 2026, two-thirds of them are the first in their family to attend graduate school and nearly one-third of them were the first in their family to attend college. Almost half identify as students of color and roughly 20% identify as part of the LGBTQ community.

Chair Schuyler mentioned the College of Agricultural Sciences and Penn State Extension enterprise showcased their programs at Ag Progress Days, Pennsylvania’s largest outdoor agricultural exposition, in mid-August. With nearly all College of Agricultural Sciences academic departments and extension offices participating, this outreach and educational event hosted over 40,000 attendees and exemplifies Penn State’s land-grant mission and its positive impact on the Commonwealth’s agricultural progress.

Chair Schuyler welcomed the incoming cohort of Administrative Fellows, including Melissa Doberstein, Program Director of the Presidential Leadership Academy for Schreyer Honors College, who is spending the year with Jennifer Wilkes; Scarlett Miller, Professor of engineering design and industrial engineering in the College of Engineering, whom Justin Schwartz is mentoring; and Juliet Pinto, Associate Professor in Journalism in the Donald P. Bellisario College of Communications, whom is spending the year with Renata Engel learning online education.

Chair Schuyler lauded the career of Frank Guadagnino, who is retiring from Penn State after serving as interim Vice President and General Counsel from October 2022 through August 2023. Prior to his appointment to the interim position, Frank served as Vice President for Administration, where he was responsible for the administration of the Office of the President, the Office of Ethics and Compliance, the Office of Veterans’ Services and the Office of the Board of Trustees. In that role, Frank also served as Secretary to the Board of Trustees. Prior to joining the Office of General Counsel as Associate General Counsel in 2014, Frank was a senior partner at Reed Smith LLP where he provided legal advice and counsel on a wide range of corporate governance, corporate finance, mergers and acquisitions and other transactional matters. Guadagnino served three University presidents and has worked with four Board chairs. Chair Schuyler presented him with Penn State Elms Collection keepsake box as a small token of the Board of Trustees appreciation for his distinguished service.

Chair Schuyler greeted Penn State’s new Vice President and General Counsel, Tabitha Oman. Oman had previously served as the University’s chief ethics and compliance officer. He noted Oman’s unique mix of experiences from the public, government, and private sectors as well as her higher education experience and understanding of the critical role of the General Counsel were among the factors that best qualified her for the position. President Bendapudi noted her deep commitment to higher education and thorough background in Penn State’s legal and compliance enterprise and was delighted for her new role.

Chair Schuyler recognized the recent retreat where Trustees and Penn State leadership reflected on the past year, had the opportunity to begin discussion of the Board’s Internal Self-Assessment Report, and hear from the Goal Leads and Co-Leads on the strengths, challenges and opportunities for advancing the Presidents goals and vision. It is evident that this Board is deeply committed to supporting President Bendapudi in creating transformational experiences for students, faculty, and staff across Penn State’s twenty-four Commonwealth Campuses and online World Campus while advancing Penn State as an engine of research, discovery, and economic development for Pennsylvania, the nation, and world. He thanked Trustees for their energy, enthusiasm and deep commitment to their responsibilities as Trustees.

Shannon Harvey, Assistant Vice President/Secretary, Office of the Board of Trustees, reported all Trustees were present except for Trustees Krieger, Pegula and Redding, constituting a quorum.

Chair Schuyler welcomed Emeriti Trustees Doran, Han, and Tribeck, noted Trustees previously met in executive session to discuss various privileged matters, and called the meeting to order. He acknowledged the Board received 97 public comments, 94 of which related to the Board’s agenda, including fiscal year 2024-2025 appropriations for operations with respect to funding of the Daily Collegian. Such funding will continue to be provided by a news consortium, supported by student fees, which will provide resources to several student media outlets, as well as scholarships for students, support for student travel, access to AP wire service, and state-of-the art facilities in the newly remodeled Willard Building. The Board recognizes the Daily Collegian and all student news important role in providing experiential learning and keeping the campus community informed. The Board further reviewed comments related to course credit surcharge, financial practices, and sustainability efforts. Submitted comments are available on the Board’s website.

Chair Schuyler welcomed Paul Clifford, Chief Executive Officer of the Penn State Alumni Association (PSAA) and Associate Vice President for alumni relations for Penn State, to provide the Board with an update on PSAA. Clifford noted PSAA delivers world-class communications, valuable services, and programs that engage 775,338 alumni world-wide and inspires engagement, philanthropy, volunteerism and advocacy. PSAA consists of 174,200 members, the largest dues paying alumni organization in the world. PSAA’s closest peers include Stanford University, the University of Michigan, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and the University of California, Berkeley. PSAA keeps alumni connected for life, engaging last year 186,000 alumni at in-person, virtual, and hybrid events.

Clifford said the PSAA network has 245 affiliate groups, more than any other school in the country. There are over 3,000 volunteer leaders involved with PSAA affiliate groups who are instrumental in engaging alumni and friends. Groups support the University through philanthropy and thousands of hours of local community service work and partner with Penn State units to leverage local connections. Examples of PSAA outreach and efforts to power career connections amongst alumni and students include the Lion Link project, the Young Alumni Ambassador program, senior year experience, the Roar Tour support to student athletes, alumni rallies at Penn State football games, and many other programs to harness the power of the Penn State network and enhance Penn State’s land grant mission. These efforts foster a sense of belonging to advance President Bendapudi’s goal of enhancing student success.

PSAA impacts across Penn State include $50,000 support of THON, affiliate groups generating more than $500,000 annually, $300,000 support to college and campus alumni societies, 174,200 dues paying Alumni Association membership, $200,000 support of Intercollegiate Athletics, 451 scholarships awarded from affiliate group endowments with a book value of $13.4M, $3M gifts made by PSAA during Greater Penn State, and during the campaign 115,596 PSAA members made gifts totaling more than $960M.

President’s Remarks

President Bendapudi noted it was exciting to begin a new semester for 9,400 new students, including 1,700 first generation students to the college experience for the first time. She observed Penn State continues to successfully attract students from around the Commonwealth, the country, and the world, with significant outreach by Penn State alumni to encourage admissions to this great land-grant university. She lauded World Campus and its celebration of 25 years, which carries out its online education with a deep sense of purpose and agility to reach students in innovative ways using cutting edge technology to supply life-long learning opportunities. She said Penn State students are remarkable, as evidenced in the Presidential leadership class she is teaching this semester. She praised faculty for their hard work to mentor and teach Penn State’s students, including the sustainability and agricultural research efforts seen yesterday on the Agricultural Tour. She cited pathogenic threats, artificial intelligence to improve air quality models, medical genomics and human chromosome sequencing, high performance battery manufacturing, humanities and arts, and many other research efforts as examples of Penn State’s leading-edge research. She thanked Penn State faculty, staff, and students for their dedicated contributions to the university. She further praised Frank Guadagnino for his efforts over his Penn State career to his alma mater.

President Bendapudi highlighted research that makes a difference is ongoing at Penn State. For instance, she discussed Penn State’s work on the initiative to strengthen the United States defense capabilities to upgrade defense superiority. She was impressed by Penn State’s training of students by faculty which yields commercialization, and brought Dr. John Mauro, Dorothy Pate Enright Professor of Materials Science and Engineering at Penn State and lead researcher on the LionGlass project, and Julianne Chen, B.S., Chemical Engineering, Materials Science and Engineering, Schreyer Honors College, Dr. Mauro’s principal research assistant, to discuss their innovative creation of a new glass called LionGlass. Dr. Mauro discussed his research on LionGlass in detail, which significantly lowered greenhouse gas emissions during production, increased its durability, and made it difficult to crack. Mauro noted he was privileged to work with students to create such pioneering technologies. He desired to achieve long-term royalties for Penn State when marketing LionGlass, which could be used to fund scholarships for underrepresented and traditionally underrepresented communities who may need financial assistance. LionGlass is a great example of how Penn State research can be brought to market and yield significant returns to the university to enhance student success, grow the research enterprise, and facilitate economic growth throughout the Commonwealth and beyond.

President Bendapudi’s remarks are available to view in their entirety here.

Chair Schuyler thanked President Bendapudi for her leadership and guests Paul Clifford, Dr. John Mauro and Julianne Chen for their presentations. Through its university-wide entrepreneurial ecosystem, including research like theirs focused on technology transfer and commercialization, Chair Schuyler remarked Penn State can be a leader in transforming scholarly breakthroughs into real-world impact.
