Looking for a future path? Love old buildings? Why not make them new again? NYU's London-based M.A. Program provides an immersion in adaptive reuse and sustainable building practice. Learn about the program at our open house, featuring presentations about our faculty and curriculum, admissions information, and career opportunities in the field. Program directors and alumni will be there to discuss the program and answer your questions. A background in Architecture or Art History is not required – this field is open to all students in the Humanities, Social Sciences, and Sciences.
